GEICO is one of the largest auto insurance providers in the country, offering multiple options for policyholders. The company sends out insurance cards after signing up for a policy and allows users to print or access digital copies through their phone. In most states (except Virginia and New Hampshire), drivers need proof of insurance, which can be obtained from GEICO. Before exploring the methods for getting proof of insurance, let's review what counts as valid proof. Proof of insurance includes the insurance declaration page, identification card, and binder letter. These documents outline policy details such as effective dates, coverage types, deductibles, and contact information. GEICO will typically send out a package containing an insurance ID card, declaration page, and possibly a binder letter after purchasing a policy. Any of these documents can serve as proof of insurance, but specific situations may require certain types of proof. For instance, law enforcement or the DMV might request the insurance ID card, while courts may ask for the binder letter. To keep your insurance information organized, consider keeping physical copies in your wallet and car, or store them digitally using GEICO's mobile app. The app allows you to quickly access your electronic ID. If you need a copy of your insurance information, GEICO offers several options: * If you bought a policy online, look for the temporary insurance cards in your confirmation email or My Account Page. * If you lost your paper card or want another copy, visit your GEICO My Account page and select "Auto Policy." You can also print or request a mailed copy. * Alternatively, call GEICO at 1-(800) 861-8380 to request a copy. * If you need proof immediately and can't print it off, download the GEICO mobile app to access your digital ID. Every state accepts digital proof of insurance but law enforcement has discretion on whether it's accepted. To access your GEICO account, you'll need your username or policy number. Without this info, contacting customer support may be necessary. Additionally, if you're in any state other than and , car insurance is mandatory. You might need to show proof in the following situations: Law enforcement: When pulled over while driving, police will request your proof of insurance along with your driver's license. Failure to provide can result in a fine and increased insurance rates. DMV: Proof is required when registering your vehicle or renewing your license plate. Check with your state's DMV for additional documents needed. Other drivers: Showing another driver your insurance proves you have coverage, allowing them to submit a claim or request an adjuster from GEICO. Lenders: Lenders require car insurance proof when applying for a loan or financing a vehicle. Employers: Employers may ask for commercial automobile insurance proof if you'll be commuting or driving as part of your job. They might also need personal liability insurance. Note that GEICO helped one customer find a lower premium and canceled their old policy after switching to the new one. More states now accept digital ID cards as valid proof-of-coverage. If you're a GEICO policyholder needing an SR-22 or FR-44, call (877) 206-0215. Unsure about these requirements? Read on for details. Also, sign up for online services if you haven't already. Insurance documentation varies by state but generally includes the policy number, dates, vehicles, and policyholders. This card is used to register your vehicle or keep it in your car as proof of insurance for law enforcement. A Proof of Coverage form shows vehicle information, effective/expiration dates, and coverage limits. Use this when showing your lienholder or leasing company your insurance. The Verification of Coverage (MD FR-19) is required by Maryland. Canadian Insurance Cards are not necessary; your US auto insurance card suffices while traveling in Canada. SR-22 or FR-44 certificates verify you have liability coverage, usually required for specific driving-related violations. These certificates are mandated by states and typically notified to you through courts or the Motor Vehicle Department. If residing in California, you must carry evidence of financial responsibility at all times and provide it when requested by law enforcement, renewing vehicle registration, or involved in a traffic collision. DMV Monitoring Insurance Coverage for Vehicle Suspension The DMV uses electronic reporting to monitor insurance coverage and enforce relevant laws. This includes tracking insurance changes since 2006 and 2023. Law enforcement and court personnel have access to this information. Insurance Requirements and Consequences * Injury/death to one person: $15,000 * Injury/death to more than one person: $30,000 * Damage to property: $5,000 Minimum Liability Insurance Requirements Effective January 1, 2025: * Private passenger vehicles: * Injury/death to one person: $30,000 * Injury/death to more than one person: $60,000 * Damage to property: $15,000 Liability Insurance and Financial Responsibility * Liability insurance compensates individuals for personal injury or property damage. * Comprehensive or collision insurance does not meet vehicle financial responsibility requirements. Additional Requirements for Commercial and Fleet Vehicles The DMV requires additional insurance options for certain vehicles, as determined by federal, state, or local agencies. These may include: * Cash deposit of $35,000 with the DMV * DMV-issued self-insurance certificate * Surety bond for $35,000 from a licensed California company For more information on these requirements and how to obtain necessary insurance, contact the relevant authorities or visit their websites. You can reach the DMV Financial Responsibility Unit at (916) 657-6677 option #2. For surety bonds, contact the Department of Insurance at insurance.ca.gov or by calling 1-800-927-4357. If you cannot afford liability insurance, consider applying for the California Low Cost Automobile Insurance Program. You can file an Affidavit of Non-Use (ANU) form with the DMV online at dmv.ca.gov or by calling the automated voice system at 1-800-777-0133, or by mail to one of the addresses listed. You can also remove the ANU during the same registration year online or by mailing evidence of insurance. If you file an ANU, your vehicle's insurance may be cancelled. However, if the vehicle is not in use when renewal fees are due, you must pay the fees or request planned nonoperation (PNO) status. You cannot file an ANU once the registration expires. Vehicle registration is suspended when DMV receives notice of a cancelled insurance policy or when insurance information is not submitted within 30 days. If your vehicle registration is suspended, submit your insurance information and/or reinstatement fee payment online at dmv.ca.gov or by mail with your notification letter and proof of liability insurance. To resolve a suspension, you can also use the DMV NOW Kiosk, mail the required documents to Sacramento, CA, or call 1-800-777-0133. You'll need to process paperwork to resolve issues with your vehicle's insurance registration, including any suspensions. You will be contacted about one of the previously listed options. Moreover, you could also face: A ticket being issued. Having your car towed away. Being held financially responsible for damages if you're involved in an accident.
